Every student is different.
Every course should be too.

That’s why we created The LSAT® Channel.
It’s live instruction almost every day of the week.*

Our top-ranked teachers present lessons you won’t find anywhere else, using real LSAT® questions.

Over 100 episodes cover every question type and skill level. You can even go beyond the test with expert advice on law school admissions.

Can’t watch live? Archives of everything are only a couple clicks away.

Watch whatever you want, whenever you want it.
See you on The LSAT® Channel.

* Access to live programming and full LSAT Channel archives available to all live instruction and Self-Paced PLUS students.
THE WILSON-STERN BOOK OF LAW SCHOOL LISTS

INFORMATION ON ABA-APPROVED LAW SCHOOLS

By

Edward M. Stern, Assistant Dean for Pre-Law Advising at Boston University and Gerald L. Wilson, Senior Associate Dean at Duke University
As Editors of this publication, we continue to try to provide to both prelaw advisors and prelaw students the most current and useful information possible. In the spring of this year we conducted our annual survey of ABA accredited law schools in the United States in order to update these lists of law school academic programs, clinical programs, available scholarships, admission policies and other information. Two notes, both caveats, should be added here. First, this is really a reference book, a ready reference, we hope. Individual schools should be contacted for more information. Second, both advisors and students should be cautious when selecting a law school on the basis of one or just a few factors such as specialized programs, joint-degree programs, salary ranges, student organizations, etc. For the most part, a legal education is a general education in law and specialization occurs after law school. Applicants should look at the total program presented by a law school and see which school in its totality seems to best meet their needs.

We hope that users of this book will also recognize that these lists are compiled from information received from law schools and that they are, to coin a phrase, “subject to change without notice.”

A very special thank you is owed to Terry Wilkerson who supervised this project this year. This book could not have been completed without her efforts. The editors are greatly appreciative of her abilities and grace throughout this project.

Please note that the authors do not endorse, support or acknowledge the effectiveness or utility of any commercial test preparation or advising program.

Some law schools offer graduate work in a general field of law while others have graduate programs in a specific area of the law. A number of law schools have joint degree programs whereby a student may combine his/her legal studies with course work in another discipline. In these cases some of the credits from the law courses will count toward the graduate degree in the other discipline while some of the graduate work will fulfill a part of the law degree. When these programs are available the individual will generally be able to complete the two degrees in a year less than if they were taken separately. A large number of law schools give special emphasis to certain areas of the law but not enough work to warrant a graduate program.

The information on the following pages has been compiled over time and is updated annually from the responses to a questionnaire submitted to the law schools by Dean Edward Stern of Boston University and Dr. Gerald Wilson of Duke University. Again thanks are due to Ms. Rita Ralston, who shepherded this year’s project from beginning to end.

Many schools change their programs from one year to another. After finding the special program in which a student is interested, attention should be given to the website and/or the most recent bulletin of that school. Several schools have indicated that a student might be able to work out another joint degree program on an individual basis.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, when there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA · LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Stern/Wilson Survey.

Second, when two asterisks () appear beside a school, the entry applies to graduates of foreign law schools only.

D. AREAS OF EMPHASIS WITHOUT A GRADUATE DEGREE

Advisors and students should note that the primary function of law school curriculum is to offer a general education in law. In most cases, specialization in one area of the law comes with on the job experience after law school. Caution should be exercised in using this list of “Areas of Emphasis” as the primary factor in choosing a law school. Students should also be aware of the possibility that too narrow specialization may limit job opportunities.

This section of the Book of Law School Lists attempts to give a listing of areas in which clinical programs are offered. Given the great variety of clinical programs and the even greater variety of titles given to these programs, we believe that it is more useful to simply identify areas. Often these clinical programs assume the form of internships or externships. Specific details about each program can be found in individual law school bulletins or in the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, where there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

Second, the list concludes with a category simply called “Various.” Resisting the temptation to label it “Miscellaneous,” the editors listed schools which indicate that they have clinical programs but did not offer specific information. In many of these cases, clinical programs are arranged individually according to the needs of the student and the opportunities available. Students and advisors should examine information provided individually by these schools.

Pro Bono Work Requirement/Public Service Requirement

Albany Law School students must satisfy the 50-hour requirement for law-related pro bono work. Pro bono activity is robust at Albany Law and programs include animal law, human trafficking, prisoner rights, child advocacy, civil rights, elder law, LGBT rights, and many more.

Appalachian School of Law: The Externship requirement (three credit hours) allows students to apply the skills learned in the core curriculum. Students typically take this course during the summer following their first year of studies at the Law School. Students work for a total of approximately 225 unpaid hours in a judges’ chambers, public law office, or public interest organization under the direct supervision of a licensed attorney.

Boston University School of Law encourages students to join the Pro Bono Program, which gives students the opportunity to dedicate their developing legal skills to unmet legal needs in the Boston area, throughout the United States and around the world. Through the Pro Bono Program, J.D. students provide 50 hours of law-related service during their three years at BU Law (LL.M. students provide 12 hours) to organizations dedicated to underrepresented groups and or social issues. Upon completion, students receive a notation on their law school transcripts confirming participation in the program.

University of California—Davis

The Pro Bono Program

This is a certificate program designed to enhance our educational process. Pro bono work is volunteer legal work performed without compensation or academic credit and under the supervision of an attorney. Students can volunteer in public interest organizations, government agencies or courts.

Participation in the program also provides students recognition for their community service; upon completion of 50 or more hours of pro bono work, students receive a Pro Bono Program certificate.

Public Service Law Program

The Public Service Law Program is an academic certification program developed for students seeking public service careers. Students are eligible to enroll at any time throughout law school but are encouraged to enroll in soon after registering for an approved course or obtaining a qualifying position. Certificate requirements include academic and experiential components. To receive a certificate, students must fulfill the academic and experiential components of the program.

University of California—Irvine

The University of California, Irvine School of Law is deeply committed to the performance of public service work. We expect that our students and faculty will be regularly engaged in public service work throughout their careers. Public service work, of course, can take many forms and reflect many values, including activities such as helping those who cannot afford legal services and working for public interest and government organizations. We encourage our students and faculty to set yearly public service goals similar to those expected of practicing attorneys.

Case Western Reserve University

Encourages all law students to participate in pro bono work and recognizes those who complete a minimum of 50 qualifying pro bono hours by April 1 of their 3L year. To qualify, Pro Bono Work must be (1) law related; (2) supervised or approved by an attorney; (3) provided to the client free of charge or at a substantially reduced rate; (4) uncompensated and not for credit; and (5) provided to underrepresented persons, interest, or communities on behalf of a not-profit or government organization. Recognition will include a certificate signed by the Dean; an annual recognition event for graduating students who have satisfied the pro bono hours minimum requirement; and, recognition in the Commencement program. The graduating student(s) who complete the greatest number of qualifying pro bono hours will receive the Pro Bono Graduating Student of the Year Award and recognition at the Commencement ceremony.

Catholic University of America

The Columbus School of Law encourages students to engage in pro bono work through the CUA Law Pro Bono Challenge. CSL students pledge to complete 2550, or 75+ hours of pro bono service during their law school tenure and are recognized accordingly at an annual reception and upon graduation.

Charleston School of Law

Regardless of a student's path after graduation, part of the Charleston School of Law's mission is to instill in students the value of public service. Students at the Charleston School of Law are required to perform 30 hours of pro bono work under the supervision of a licensed attorney before graduation. Generally students will receive pro bono credit when a student performs law related work without pay or academic credit for a public interest attorney or for a private attorney when he or she has taken a case on a pro bono or appointed basis. A public interest attorney is an attorney employed by an organization that is educational, charitable, governmental or nonprofit in nature. The school also requires its faculty to provide 30 hours of pro bono work every three years.
University of Colorado
University of Colorado encourages pro bono activities by a voluntary Public Service Pledge program. Students who complete 50 hours of law-related public service work in law school will be recognized at graduation and work will be reflected on transcript.

Columbia University: Every candidate for a J.D. degree must devote 40 hours to public interest field work between the start of the second year of law school and the end of the third year as a prerequisite for graduation. Work will qualify if it is uncompensated (financially or by academic credit), public interest or public service law-related work, broadly defined and regardless of political orientation.

Cornell University
The Public Interest Law Union and the Office of Public Service can help you start building your commitment to pro bono service during law school. The purpose of the Public Service Challenge is to provide school-wide recognition of Cornell Law Students who devote time to public service activities. Students who participate in the Public Service Challenge will receive a Certificate from Dean Stewart Schwab upon each level of completion.

University of Denver
Public Interest
50 hours during law school tenure

University of District of Columbia School of Law

Duke University's Pro Bono Project, students provide volunteer legal services in individual areas of interest. While not required, participation is strongly encouraged.

Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University: Every student must complete at least 50 hours of pro bono service prior to graduation. Students who provide 75+ hours of pro bono service receive recognition at graduation.

Florida State does have a pro bono requirement. Students must fulfill 20 hours of pro bono/public service work during the second or third year of law school.

Georgetown University Law Center encourages students to participate in pro bono activities through the Pro Bono Challenge. Students who perform at least 75 hours of law-related pro bono work during their years at Georgetown are recognized at Graduation.

Georgia State University
To encourage and support students who provide pro bono services to the community, the College of Law has adopted the Georgia State University College of Law Pro Bono Recognition Program. Pro bono activities include not only those that ensure adequate legal services for moderate and low income individuals but efforts that enhance the capacity of law and legal institutions to do justice, and activities in the local community that promote justice. The College of Law's pro bono recognition program is designed to encouraged students to engage in such activities while in law school and thus conduct themselves in accordance with highest values and standards of the legal profession.

Hamline University School of Law has a pro bono service requirement of 24 hours over the course of law school.

Harvard University has a pro bono requirement of 50 hours over the course of law school. On average, students complete approximately 600 hours of pro bono work before they graduate.

The University of Hawaii | William S. Richardson School of Law

Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University offers students opportunities to engage in pro bono service on a not-for-credit basis. The Public Service Certificate Program provides students the opportunity to volunteer with nonprofit organizations, governmental agencies and private law firms, or practitioners doing pro bono work. Students who participate receive a certificate from Hofstra Law recognizing their public service. The student-run Unemployment Action Center is a nonprofit corporation that offers free advice and representation to persons denied unemployment benefits.

The University of Idaho College of Law is committed to providing opportunities for law students that emphasize the value and habit of service to the community. Accordingly, all students are required to perform 40 hours of uncompensated law-related pro bono service as a condition of graduation. The purpose of this pro bono requirement is to instill in students a commitment to their responsibility as lawyers to give back to the community and promote justice by assisting the underserved and underrepresented. As a result of the program, students gain practical legal experience, clients are served, and legal service providers gain valuable assistance. Students are given the opportunity to fulfill their public service requirements in a wide range of settings, including legal service organizations, government agencies, private firms (pro bono cases), non-profits, and legislative offices.
The Pro Bono Project at Indiana University Maurer School of Law is a cooperative program between the Law School and the bar and bench of the surrounding area to provide civil legal assistance to people who could not otherwise afford it. Students are assigned to work closely with volunteer lawyer on a wide variety of matters. The school has established an aspirational goal of 60 hours of pro bono service for students during their time in law school.

Indiana University McKinney School of Law encourages students to take part in our Pro Bono Program, where you’ll gain valuable hands-on experience while helping some of society’s most underrepresented populations. Students who complete at least 50 hours of pro bono work during the course of their law school career will receive a Pro Bono notion on their transcript, receive a certificate, and participate in a recognition reception at the conclusion in each academic year that you contribute 50 of more hours to the program.

Liberty University School of Law: Liberty University School of Law has a long tradition of expecting and encouraging community service from its students in keeping with its mission “to affirm the Christian worldview and provide a practical expression of God’s love for mankind.” The law school does not mandate volunteerism; however, it is working to develop a culture of service among the law students, faculty, staff, and administration.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles mandates 40 hours public service work beginning entering class of Fall 94 and thereafter.

The University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement. After completion of their first year and before their final semester of law school, students must perform a minimum of 30 hours of uncompensated public service work. Institutional support is provided in the form of a half-time director and a half-time assistant who help students in meeting this requirement by having over 300 locations identified as well as assisting students in establishing other locations according to their individual interest.

University of Maine School of Law’s faculty has adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard under which every student is encouraged to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service prior to the time of graduation.

“Pro bono legal service” is defined as work involving the provision of legal services that is performed without either financial compensation or academic credit.

Examples include such work for legal services providers, individual lawyers providing pro bono service, social service agencies, low income organizations, civil rights organizations, environmental organizations, consumer organizations, and governmental agencies providing service to individual members of the public who are disadvantaged. Partisan political activity is not included in the definition of “pro bono legal services.” Students achieving 80 hours are recognized at graduation.

University of Maryland requires full-time day students to complete a public service requirement by taking one of a number of credit bearing courses in which students have substantial responsibility for providing legal assistance to poor persons or organizations representing the interest of poor persons. These courses:

a) provide students with an experience (including direct professional contact with poor persons) on how the law operates in practice; and

b) include regular classes in which the faculty member provides instruction that, when integrated with the practice experience, will help the students to understand, apply and critique theory and practice; and

c) have a professional responsibility component.

University of Memphis Law School is committed to instill within its students the very heart of the legal profession — providing equal justice under the law. Because equal justice comes at a cost, lawyers have a unique and rewarding obligation to provide pro bono services to those unable to pay. Memphis Law’s Pro Bono Program is designed to nurture this ethical obligation and provide students with the opportunity to gain a practical, hands-on experience while helping improve the lives of the under-represented. Students are required to complete 40 hours of pro bono work in order to graduate.

University of Michigan Law School asks students to voluntarily commit to performing 50 hours of pro bono service while enrolled at Michigan Law, allowing students to connect their developing knowledge to the world outside the Law School and gaining valuable legal skills while helping an organization in our community meet the needs of underrepresented individuals. Students may choose from Law School-organized projects (ranging from those that provide legal assistance to local residents to projects that spotlight events across the nation and around the globe), or may organize their own projects. Graduating students performing at least 50 hours of pro bono work will receive a Certificate of Pro Bono Service from the Dean, recognition at an annual pro bono banquet, and acknowledgment during the Honors Convocation.

University of Nebraska seeks to encourage and recognize volunteer legal service by second and third year students through the Pro Bono Initiative. Students completing 40 hours or more of approved, qualified pro bono work during their second and/or third years will receive a Dean’s certificate upon graduation.
Clinical Programs

University of Nevada, Las Vegas—William S. Boyd School of Law requires first-year students to participate in a community service program in which teams of students, working with Legal Aid Center of Southern Nevada prepare and conduct weekly workshops for unrepresented people on basic procedures in family or small claims court and on basic landlord/tenant law and bankruptcy law.

New York Law School: Applicants seeking to be admitted to the New York State bar on or after January 1, 2015 will need to demonstrate that they have completed 50 hours of qualifying pro bono work prior to submitting their applications for admission.

University of North Carolina: The Pro Bono Program tracks the number of hours completed by each law student in order to recognize outstanding pro bono service. Students completing fifty of more hours of pro bono service receive a letter from the Director of the Pro Bono Program and the Dean of the law school acknowledging the contribution they have made to our community. Those who do more than seventy-five hours of pro bono service while a law student are recognized by the North Carolina Bar Association at the public service reception held at the end of each school year in the law school Rotunda. Furthermore, students who complete one hundred or more hours of pro bono service are individually acknowledged at law school graduation. Students completing 50 or more hours during their law school career will receive special notations on their official transcripts.

Northeastern University School of Law: At Northeastern University School of Law, we fuse theory and practice with ethical and social justice ideals so students understand what lawyers do, how they should do it, and the difference they can make in the lives of others. Therefore, all students must fulfill a public interest graduation requirement. Under this rule, public interest is defined as employment or service with a government agency; a legal aid, legal services, public defender, victim advocate or similar agency; an organization or attorney advocating law reform or performing pro bono legal representation; or any placement where the dominant characteristic is service to underrepresented groups. Clinical internships are not included in this definition and private firms operated for profit are only included under the 30 hour pro bono option. The requirement may be fulfilled in any of the following ways: completion of a public interest clinical course; completion of a public interest co-op; 30 hours of uncompensated legal work in a public interest setting or a public interest pro bono project with a private firm during the second semester of the first year, second and/or third year of law school; or completion of an independent study project of at least 3 credit hours.

Northern Kentucky University Chase College of Law requires all students to complete 50 hours of pro bono service during their law school tenure. Students may satisfy the hourly requirement at one placement site, or may satisfy the requirement with several different projects involving fewer than 50 hours, so long as they ultimately complete a total of 50 hours of pro bono service. Fifty (50) hours is a minimum requirement; students are encouraged to perform additional hours if they so choose.

Northern Kentucky University Chase College of Law: The Pro Bono Program tracks the number of hours completed by each law student in order to recognize outstanding pro bono service. Students completing fifty of more hours of pro bono service receive a letter from the Director of the Pro Bono Program and the Dean of the law school acknowledging the contribution they have made to our community. Those who do more than seventy-five hours of pro bono service while a law student are recognized by the North Carolina Bar Association at the public service reception held at the end of each school year in the law school Rotunda. Northwestern University. We expect all students to complete at least 40 hours of community service work during their J.D. degrees.

The Nova Southeastern University College of Law Pro Bono Honor Program recognizes students who work pro bono for the public interest while enrolled in law school. Students completing a certain number of service hours will be awarded this graduation honor. The program is part of the Public Interest Law Center, which provides information and resources to students interested in working for the public interest and acknowledges that work.

The University of Pennsylvania Law School requires all students entering the J.D. Program to perform 70 hours of unpaid public service work over the course of their J.D. Program through the Toll Public Interest Center.

Roger Williams University School of Law—requires all students to complete 50 hours of law-related public service over the course of their J.D. Program.

Rutgers Law School: The Pro Bono Program places students in a wide variety of public interest or public service law offices where students perform a minimum of 35 hours of service. The program is voluntary.

Saint Louis University School of Law does not have a pro bono or public service requirement, however, students are strongly encouraged to participate in pro bono legal service prior to graduation. Pro bono work may be on behalf of a government agency, a non-profit organization or indigent individuals.

University of St. Thomas School of Law (MN): As a requirement for graduation, all students must complete fifty hours of public service during their three years of law school.

St. Thomas University requires its law students complete a minimum of 50 hours of pro bono work as a requirement for graduation. It is designed to give second and third year students legal experience under the supervision of lawyers in a variety of non-profit offices, government agencies, and law firms.

Santa Clara University: Students seeking to earn the Public Interest Law Certificate must complete 50 hours of community volunteer work promoting public interest and social justice.
Seattle University School of Law invites all law students to pledge to complete at least 100 hours for full-time students or 50 hours for part-time students of legal pro bono and community volunteer work before they graduate.

University of South Carolina: Through the University of South Carolina’s Pro Bono Program, students provide volunteer legal services to a variety of projects and areas of interests. Participation is not required, but strongly encouraged and opportunities for service are readily available.

South Texas College of Law: The College’s Pro Bono Honors Program seeks to encourage professionalism both by providing pro bono public service opportunities for students and by recognizing this service through a formal certificate program. Students enrolled in this voluntary certificate program must perform at least 50 service hours at a pre-approved placement or seek approval for an alternative placement from the program director.

SMU Dedman School of Law requires all students entering the J.D. Program in the Fall of 1993 or thereafter to complete 30 hours of work in approved law-related public service placements.

Stetson University College of Law: As a requirement for graduation, each student must complete 60 hours of public service.

Syracuse University College of Law Recognition for Pro Bono and Community Service: In recognition of the commitment to pro bono and community service work by students of the Syracuse University College of Law, the following recognition program has been created. Students who are in good academic standing and have completed at least 30 hours of pro bono and community service will receive special recognition at graduation. There are two categories of Pro Bono and Community Service Recognition Awards.

Blue Pro Bono Community Service Award: (complete the recommended 30 hours of service) Orange Pro Bono and Community Service Award: (exceed the recommended 30 hours of service by at least 1 full our)

In addition, the top three graduating students providing the most pro bono and community service hours shall be individually recognized.

Texas A&M University School of Law: Each student must perform no less than thirty hours of pro bono work through a placement that has been pre-approved by the School of Law. The pro bono work may be commenced following the completion of the first year of law school, and must be completed prior to graduation. The student is responsible for selecting a placement, contacting that office, arranging to do the work, completing the work, and filling out all proper forms. The work must be law related; clerical work is appropriate only to the extent needed to carry out the overall legal task. The work must be uncompensated; students may not receive monetary compensation, academic credit, or other tangible benefits for performing the service. The work must be supervised by an attorney.

Touro Law Center: As a condition of graduation, every student must satisfy the Public Interest Law Perspective Requirement by successful completion of certain clinical programs or classroom courses or by certification of 40 hours of pro bono work.

Tulane Law School was the first in the country to institute a mandatory pro bono or a community service program. Since 1987, Tulane has required each graduating student to have performed 20 hours of supervised, uncompensated legal work for clients who could not otherwise afford assistance. In 2006 requirement was increased to 30 hours.

Valparaiso University School of Law adopted a pro bono requirement in 1988. Valparaiso law students must perform 40 hours of pro bono work supervised by an attorney. Students must complete the work after completion of 30 credit hours and prior to graduation. If 60 hours or more are completed, it will be noted on the student’s transcript.

University of Washington requires each student to complete 60 hours of public service legal work.

Washburn University School of Law: Some Washburn University School of Law Certificate programs include a public service component.

Washington University School of Law: Students are encouraged to participate in a Pro Bono Pledge and fulfill 50 hours of pro bono work before graduation. Our Public Service Advisory Board helps individual find service projects that are tailored to their interests. We have long-standing institutional connections with many organizations throughout the larger St. Louis community and beyond.

Western State College of Law has a voluntary Public Service Program in which students use their legal skills to perform law-related work for the community and the underprivileged and are recognized for that work upon completing 60 hrs. of service.

Widener University Commonwealth Law School: Provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of 60 hours of pro bono work over the course of their J.D. career.

Widener University Delaware Law School provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of sixty hours of pro bono work over the course of the J.D. career.
Clinical Programs

Willamette University College of Law: Willamette’s voluntary pro bono Honors Program enables students to enhance their learning experience by participating in community-based legal service projects. Students gain valuable hands-on involvement in the community by volunteering with a government agency or with a public interest or nonprofit organization. All Willamette law students are eligible to participate and receive pro bono Honors credit.

William Mitchell College of Law: Provides a wide variety of volunteer options through the Minnesota Justice Foundations. Students who serve 50 or more hours through MJF or clinics receive a transcript certification.

Law School Publications Open to Student Participation

This section of the Book of Law School Lists contains a summary of specialized law school publications open for student participation. In addition to the scholarly specialized publications listed in the next few pages, many law schools publish newspapers, newsletters and yearbooks. In most cases these are entirely student run.

Further information about these publications can be obtained by examining the individual school's website and/or the school's most recent bulletin or by consulting the ABA - LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools. Where designated by an asterisk (*), the information came from the Official Guide rather than a response to the Wilson/Stem survey.

3. Angela D. Dales Merit Scholarship Program for first-year students:
   - Merit Scholarships are awarded in the form of a credit against the tuition charged to the student who receives the award.
   - Eligibility for an award during the student’s first year of Law School is determined based on the student’s Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) score and undergraduate grade point average (UGPA) as determined by LSAC. Eligibility for retention of an award during the student’s second and third years is determined based on the student’s academic performance during Law School.
   - The Law School is able to award only a limited number of these scholarships, and scholarships will be awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Applicants therefore are encouraged to complete their Law School application at the earliest possible date. An award is not finalized until the applicant has been accepted to the Law School and has paid his or her seat deposit.
   - Transfer students are not eligible for Merit Scholarships.

Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School

Access to Law School Opportunity Program (ALSO): ALSO is designed to allow participants to demonstrate that their performance in college, the LSAT or both do not reflect their capability to succeed in law school. An applicant’s performance in the program will be considered with the balance of his or her application for the purpose of making an admission decision.

Campbell Law School

Approximately 50–75 students are given the opportunity to participate in our seven week performance-based admission program (P BAP). The students take two courses of three credit hours each. A final exam is given in each course. A student who receives a “B” in both courses is automatically admitted to the fall program. Students who do not meet this criteria, but who demonstrate potential for success in law school, will be placed on a waiting list for the fall program.

Charleston School of Law

The Conditional Admission Program (CAP) is a performance-based admission program. Students are required to take two law school courses in order to provide the most accurate indication of a student’s potential for law school success. CAP is a three week program. Both classes are online and each meets for two hours a day, Monday – Friday. Participants in CAP are admitted to the next entering J.D. class if they earn a minimum of a “C” in each course and have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50. For more information, visit CharlestonLaw.edu/CAP.

University of Detroit Mercy

An 8 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Legal Writing and Criminal Law. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 20 students generally participate. The Special Summer Program (SSP) is operated for minority, disadvantaged, or disabled applicants who do not meet the minimum standards of the entering class, but show potential for the study of law. SSP applicants must have at least one LSAT score in the 15th percentile. Question 13 of the application asks the applicant if he/she would like to be considered for the SSP. In a separate statement, applicants must describe the circumstances that qualify him/her for the SSP. In case of a disability, the applicant is requested to provide documentation. To be eligible for matriculation in the fall, students of the program must pass the substantive criminal law course, pass the legal research and writing course, and receive the unanimous evaluation of the SSP faculty. The cost of the program is $500 for tuition and $18 for parking. The contact person for the program is Kimberly Jones, Director of Admissions, joneski@udmercy.edu.

University of the District of Columbia

A 3 week summer conditional admission program. Required classes are Legal Writing, Reasoning and Analysis (class and tutorials); Torts and Criminal Law or Contracts. Students do not receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 8 to 16 students participate. Criteria for admission into the program varies, usually the LSAT and/or GPA are below the “accepted” numerical standards or the student’s writing or organizational skills may be of concern and below what is deemed acceptable. There is no special application procedure. The student must attend every class and complete every assignment and exam in order to meet the condition of his or her admission into the fall class. At the end of the program each student is provided with an evaluation of his or her performance in the program; they are also counseled about their progress and about areas in which they may need to improve. If appropriate the program director recommends that students participate in the Academic Support Program. There is no cost to the student for participating in the program. The contact person for the program is Associate Dean Laurie Morin, Academic Affairs; she can be reached at lmorin@udc.edu.
Florida Coastal School of Law
The Alternative Admission Model Program for Legal Education (AAMPLE®) is a performance-based admissions program that rewards students who demonstrate the desire, commitment, and level of achievement necessary to manage the rigors of law school. Students are required to take two law school courses selected from our regular law school curriculum and modified to provide the most accurate indication of a student’s potential for law school success. Students may choose to take the courses on-campus or online. Within each course, students will take two quizzes and a final exam. Students who successfully pass each course with a 2.5 G.P.A. or higher are automatically accepted into the school’s Juris Doctor program. Florida Coastal offers the AAMPLE program twice a year—once in the summer for admission to our fall class and once in the fall for admission to our spring class. For more information, please contact Nicole Schumer, Assistant Director of Admissions, at nschumer@fcs1.edu.

Indiana University McKinney School of Law
McKINNEY School of Law participates in the Indiana Conference of Legal Education Opportunity (ICLEO). ICLEO is a state based program that helps minority, low income, or educationally disadvantaged college graduates pursue a law degree and a career in the Indiana legal community. The students selected participate in the 6 week ICLEO Summer Institute. The housing and course materials are provided and there is no tuition to participate. Students who successfully complete the program are certified as ICLEO Fellows and receive an annual stipend of $6,500 (public) or $9,000 (private) for up to 3 years. There is a separate application and selection process. For more information, please visit mckinneylaw.edu/admissions/jd/diversity.html.

Louisiana State University
Legal Methods course, successful completion, admission for Fall. Must have approval of Faculty Committee to enter summer program.

University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law
Approximately 15 applicants given the opportunity to participate in a six-week course (Monday through Friday) designed to enhance their skills in order to improve their chances for success in law school. All who complete the work in a satisfactory (effort and performance are evaluated) manner are allowed to enter law school in the fall. Most, if not all, of the participants successfully matriculate each fall.

Loyola—New Orleans

University of Memphis
To help achieve diversity in the classroom, during the summer the University of Memphis School of Law operates the Tennessee Institute for Pre-Law (TIP) program. The TIP program is for Tennessee residents (and Border County residents) who are not admitted through the regular admissions process, but who show potential for the study of law and bring diversity to the class. Applicants who are admitted into TIP and successfully complete the summer program will be eligible for admission in the fall semester to the University of Memphis School of Law. The TIP portion of the application requests information on whether a student is a first-generation college graduate, foreign-born, or a first-generation U.S. citizen; whether a student is a graduate of a historically minority undergraduate institution; whether a student has a disability; or whether a student is or was economically disadvantaged. The required TIP supplemental statement asks the student to describe the circumstances that qualify the student for participation in the program and the way in which the student might contribute to diversity in the law school.
New York Law School offers an online 6-week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes: Fourth Amendment and Negotiable Instruments. Students do receive credit for the classes. Twenty seats are reserved in the program for those seeking admission to New York Law School. The admissions committee invites selected students to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for the student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria are: 1) satisfactory participation, (2) no grade below a C in either class, and (3) a cumulative GPA of 2.5. This year, the program cost was $3500, but this figure is subject to change in the future. The contact person for the program is Ella Mae Estrada, Assistant Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid, ellamae.estrada@nyls.edu, 212.431.2888.

North Carolina Central University School of Law students selected to participate in the Performance–Based Admission Program (PBAP) spend two weeks in a classroom setting where they are given instruction in one substantive law course by experienced faculty members. Additionally, students learn basic skills: how to prepare for class; how to organize and outline course material; and how to answer legal questions. Applicants are evaluated through diagnostic testing, oral and written assignments and interviews. These evaluations determine whether the PBAP applicant will be admitted to the School of Law in the fall.

Nova Southeastern University A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Introduction to the 4th Amendment and Negotiable Instruments. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 100 students participate, subject to change yearly. The admissions committee invites selected applicants to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for a student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria is no grade below a C in either class and a GPA of 2.5. The cost of the program is $1500. Please contact HYPERLINK “mailto:AAMPLE@nova.edu” AAMPLE@nova.edu or 954–262–6119 for more information.

University of Oklahoma The 1LS (First-year Law Summer Start) Program is a summer program for a select group of admitted students that runs from late May to mid-July. The focus of the 1LS Program is to give a first look at law school and provide the opportunity to earn law school credits during the summer. Students will take a course typically offered in the fall of their first year of law school, and a Legal Methods class. Students participating in the 1LS Program benefit from the opportunity to begin law school early and lighten their course and final exam loads for the Fall semester.

Oklahoma City University Two pass/fail courses.

Saint John’s University A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class which varies from summer to summer. The class is always a first-year required course, last year it was Property, the year before it was Contracts. Students receive credit for the class, if they successfully complete the program by earning a B minus or better. Approximately 30 students participate each summer. Applicants need to request consideration for the Summer Institute no later than March 30th. Alternatively, an applicant may be invited to the program if their application is not otherwise admissible. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must earn a B minus or better in the course. The student pays only the cost of books. There is a required $750 deposit (the same as for all admits). If the student successfully completes the program this deposit is credited towards tuition, if not, the $750 is refunded to them. For more information contact either Robert M. Harrison, Assistant Dean for Admissions, harrisor@stjohns.edu, or Theresa McNerney, mcnernt1@stjohns.edu.

Saint Louis University The Summer Institute at Saint Louis University is designed to identify students who have experienced the effects of educational disadvantage. The Institute includes a substantive first semester course and a course in legal skills. The program lasts seven weeks, beginning in late May/early June and ending in mid-July. Students who successfully complete this program are accepted into the School of Law for the Fall semester. Limited to 25 students. Tuition and books are free.
St. Mary’s University
A 5 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Logic & Writing and Analytical Skills. Between 15–20 students participate in the program. They are recommended by the Admissions Committee from the general applicant pool, and selected by the Program Director. There is no special application procedure. In order to matriculate into law school in the fall, the student must be recommended for admission by the professors conducting the summer program after completion. The cost of the program is $2,000 for day students and $1,500 for evening students, subject to change.

St. Thomas University School of Law
Admitted students have the option, or are required to enroll in a two week course prior to entering their 1L year. Introduction to Legal Studies (ILS) gives students the opportunity to experience how a law school classroom is conducted, while also introducing them to the format and setting of the law school exam.

Seattle University School of Law
Seattle University School of Law: 7 week required attendance in the Access Admission Program. All students are considered full members of the entering class and guaranteed admission in fall.

University of South Dakota
A 6 week screening program which will yield 10 admits. Between 30–50 students participate in the program. Students are required to take two classes, Agency and Personal Property. Students are selected based on a completed file that is eligible to begin law school that fall; usually the only concern is in the numbers, either a low LSAT and/or GPA. Applicants cannot apply for the program; they are invited to participate after review of the law school application and supporting material. During the final week of the program, participants take an exam in each course, anonymously. The two exam scores are averaged, and those who have a minimum grade of 70 (mid-C) on EACH exam, AND whose scores rank in the top ten of the program are offered admission. The cost of the program is $1,000 plus books, and room & board. The contact person for the program is Jean Henriques, Admissions Officer, jhenriqu@usd.edu.

Syracuse University
A 3 week, summer program called Legal Education Opportunity Program (LEO) that is not a conditional admission program, but a program that provides and opportunity for students who may not have otherwise been offered admission. Students are required to take three classes, Introduction to Law and the Legal System, Legal Writing Workshop, and Legal Skills. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Between 20–30 students usually participate in the LEO program. Recognizing that numerical indicators are not always the best predictors of success in law school—even when considered in combination with other factors—the College of Law admits a limited number of students each year through the LEO program. There is no special application procedure. Students do not need to achieve set grades during this program, but need to successfully complete the program requirements and take an exam at the end of the three weeks. Tuition costs are covered for all LEO participants during the summer program. For more information, contact Melanie Rodriguez, Assoc. Director of Career Services, mrodriguez@law.syr.edu

Texas Southern University
Special attention to non-quantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.
Texas Tech University

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required courses change from year to year. Students receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 20–25 students participate in the program. The Admissions Committee decides which students will be considered for this program and those that will be accepted for the program. It is designed for those with lower academic indicators, but additional information in the file indicates the ability to succeed in law school. There is no special application procedure. If accepted for the summer program, they must attend the summer program to proceed to the fall. There is no required grade point average from the summer to proceed to the fall. The current tuition rate is $334 for Texas residents and $580 for non-residents. Students will pay the current tuition rate and all tuition generated fees. Since these rates change from year to year, the applicant should check the university website for current information. The contact person for the program is Terence L. Cook, Assistant Dean for Admissions and Recruitment, terence.cook@ttu.edu.

Thomas M. Cooley Law School

The Professional Exploration Program (PEP) is a 5–8 day intensive program. This program is designed to give law school applicants who do not meet the minimum admissions requirements a chance to qualify for alternative admission. It also provides law school applicants the opportunity for self-exploration and discovery of strengths and weaknesses in their pursuit of a career. At the completion of the program, the students’ performance is evaluated by the PEP Committee. Students are notified by letter, three weeks after the program, as to the committee’s decision whether they’ve been offered admission to Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

University of Tulsa College of Law

All admitted first year law students have the option to begin law school in the summer. This program is not conditional.

Widener University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes. Student participation varies from year to year. Criteria for admission is based on applicants who have displayed promise of success in legal studies even though they may have excelled in only one of the two principal standardized predictors of success—the Law School Admission Test and the undergraduate grade point average. The personal statement, letters of recommendation and all materials submitted in support of the application are considered. There is no special application procedure. Participants who obtain a 2.3 cumulative grade point average in the program are offered admission to the fall class. The cost of the program is $1000. Successful program participants receive a $5,000 renewable tuition scholarship upon their fall enrollment.

E. SCHOOLS PERMITTING PRE-SELECTION OF STUDENTS TO BE INTERVIEWED BY FIRMS

Schools listed below unless otherwise noted, permit firms interviewing on campus to pre-select 100% of the candidates they will interview. Only schools responding to the Wilson/Stern survey were included.

University of Alabama
- All students are permitted to submit for all employers.
- Employers pre-select candidates.

Albany Law School
- On campus interviews are scheduled based on 100% employer prescreening.

American University

University of Arizona
- All students are permitted to submit for all employers.
- Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Arizona State University
- May pre-select 100%.

University of Arkansas—Little Rock

Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School

Baylor University

Boston College Law School
- While employers may pre-select all candidates, they are strongly encouraged to participate in an interview lottery system to ensure that all interested students have a broad range of interviewing opportunities. Over 90% of employers participate in our lottery system.

Boston University School of Law
- All students are permitted to submit to all employers. Employers preselect 100% of candidates for interviews.

Brooklyn Law School
- All students are permitted to submit for all employers. While employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of the candidates, they are strongly encouraged to reserve interview slots for students ranked below their stated criteria so that a larger number of interested students have interviewing opportunities.

University of California—Davis

California Western University

Capital University

Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)
- Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Case Western Reserve University
- All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Creighton University
Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

University of Denver

DePaul University College of Law
Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.

Drake University
Drake University does not permit firms to preselect 100% of the interview candidates unless this is the only way a firm will come. If this is the case, we allow them to do it, with notice to the students.

Duke University
Students rank the firms they are interested in interviewing with and the Office of Career and Professional Development arranges a schedule that accommodates as many of those requests as possible. Firms do not pre-select the students they interview with.

Duquesne University
Interviewed by firms. Employers are asked to select 75% of the interviews, 25% are selected through the lottery system.

Emory University

Florida Coastal School of Law
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. FCSL does permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms based on criteria by the employer.

Florida International University
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates whom they will interview.

University of Florida
Employers may pre-select candidates. Criteria include experience, extra curricular activities, grades, evidence of research and writing skills, and ties to geographic region.

George Mason University
School permitting pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.

Georgia State University
Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

University of Georgia
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Gonzaga University
Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

Hamline University School of Law
All resumes are sent to employers, although they may pre-select.

Maurice A. Deane School of Law —Hofstra University

University of Houston Law Center
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates.
University of Idaho

University of Louisville Brandeis School of Law
Employers may pre-select 100%, but are encouraged to consider factors other than strict academic performance. Several employers try to interview all who submit resumes.

Indiana University Maurer School of Law
Employers are encouraged to see all interested candidates, but may pre-select as they choose.

Indiana University McKinney School of Law
Students submit bids to apply for an interview with a participating employer. Employers select the students they wish to interview from the bids received for the position.

The John Marshall Law School

University of Kansas
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers preselect 90% of their candidates; 10% are selected by lottery.

University of Kentucky
Employers have the option to pre-screen resumes. However, approximately 15% of employers coming on campus choose instead to see all interested candidates.

Lewis & Clark Law School
We permit 100% pre-selection of students by employers.

Liberty University School of Law
Employers may preselect but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law
Employers may pre-select 100%, but are encouraged to consider factors other than strict academic performance. Several employers try to interview all who submit resumes.

University of Maine

Marquette University
Employers may pre-select 100%.

University of Maryland
We permit 100% pre-selection of students to be interviewed by employers.

University of Memphis
Permits employers to pre-select 100% of the students that the firm chooses to interview. They are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

Case Western Reserve University  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Catholic University of America  Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Chapman University Fowler School of Law  The ABA has changed the rule regarding the reporting of the highest of multiple LSAT scores, however, this does not change the review process. If the candidate has taken the LSAT multiple times, the Committee will review all of the LSAT scores. From an admissions perspective, the average score may be the best indication of an applicant’s success. It is advisable for the applicant to explain why one score is more indicative of his or her likelihood of success. For merit scholarship purpose, we will utilize the high LSAT SCORE.
Charleston School of Law  Highest score considered.
University of Chicago  We review all scores, however for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.
Chicago–Kent College of Law  If the LSAT is taken more than once, the Admissions Committee may consider the average score, the more recent score or the higher score, depending on individual circumstances. Preference is typically given to the highest score earned.
University of Cincinnati  Use highest score.
City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law  Consider all scores, with some weight being given to highest.
University of Colorado  Consider and review all scores, but high LSAT score is used when reporting.
Columbia University  The Committee considers the entire LSAT testing history when evaluating applications for admission.
University of Connecticut  All scores are considered however, the high LSAT score is used when reporting.
Cornell University  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed. Explanations for differences are suggested.
Creighton University  Use higher score unless there is reason to discount one.
University of Dayton  Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.
University of Denver  Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.
DePaul University College of Law  We will consider the high score.
University of Detroit Mercy  We review all scores.
University of the District of Columbia School of Law  Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Drake University  Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Duke University  Will consider higher score or average, depending on circumstances and the overall context of the application. An addendum is suggested when there is a significant difference between test scores.
Duquesne University  Consider the highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University  The highest score is used.
Elon University  Highest Score considered.
Emory University  The highest LSAT score is used.
University of Florida  Review all scores. Candidates should discuss score differences.
Florida Coastal School of Law  Florida Coastal School of Law uses the highest score.
Florida International University  Only the applicant’s highest LSAT score is considered.
Florida State University  Average. Consider all scores within 5 years.
Fordham University: Consider all scores, but report the high as per ABA instructions.

George Mason University: We utilize the high LSAT.

George Washington University: We use the high LSAT.

Georgetown University Law Center: For reporting purposes, Georgetown Law adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score. For evaluation purposes, the Georgetown Admissions Committee typically averages LSAT scores. Georgetown may consider the higher LSAT score if you have only taken the LSAT twice. Please address any mitigating circumstances you feel the Admissions Committee should consider.

University of Georgia: Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.

Georgia State University: Admissions Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.

Golden Gate University: We utilize high LSAT.

Gonzaga University: We utilize the high LSAT.

Hamline University School of Law: All scores considered significant weight to highest.

Harvard Law School: We have access to all scores on file at LSAC, but evaluate your highest score.

University of Hawaii | William S. Richardson School of Law: We take the higher score.

Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University: The Admissions Committee will review all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.

University of Houston Law Center: Primary consideration given to the highest score.

University of Idaho: More weight placed on higher score.

University of Illinois: Take the highest score.

Indiana University Maurer School of Law: Take the highest score.

Indiana University McKinney School of Law: Take the highest score.

University of Iowa: We use the higher score.

The John Marshall Law School: We tend to use the highest score.

University of Kansas: Consider all scores, but give the most weight to the highest score.

University of Kentucky: Multiple scores are averaged in almost all cases.

Lewis & Clark Law School: Use the highest score, but all scores are seen.

Liberty University School of Law: Use the highest score.

University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law: Emphasize the most recent score in our evaluation process. Appreciate explanations for multiple takings.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles: The average score is used unless the applicant has submitted an explanation for the lower score.

Loyola University—Chicago: Higher of 2 scores, if highest is most recent.

University of Maine School of Law: Averages scores, significant increase noted.

University of Maryland: Use the higher score.

Marquette University: Use the higher score.

SUNY Buffalo Law School
While the Admissions Committee will see all reported scores, we place considerably more weight on the highest LSAT score.

Stetson University College of Law
Stetson takes the highest score. Extenuating circumstances are taken into consideration.

Syracuse University
Syracuse Law will still review all LSAT scores in the overall evaluation process. The student’s HIGHEST LSAT attempt is the score that will be calculated with the cumulative GPA to determine the index number and is the score generally used to make a decision.

Temple University Beasley School of Law
Temple University Beasley School of Law will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.

University of Tennessee
We look at the highest score, but all test scores are reviewed. Students are encouraged to submit an addendum if they would like to explain a change in LSAT score.

University of Texas
We review all scores but will take the highest score.

Texas Tech University
1–5 point span, we use highest; over 5 points, we use the newest score.

Texas A&M University School of Law
The Admissions Committee will consider all reported scores and give greater weight to the highest score.

Thomas M. Cooley
Consider only the highest score in our admission formula. Score must be within 5 years of application date.

University of Toledo
Highest score only.

Touro Law Center—Jacob D. Fuchsberg
Touro Law takes the higher/highest score (provide contextual information/addendum if there is a dramatic difference in scores).

Tulane University
Tulane looks at all scores, but relies on the applicant to explain why a higher score should be given more weight.

University of Tulsa
Take the Highest Score.

University of Utah
We will presumptively use the highest score. The reviewer, however, may use the average score if information in the file indicate that the score is the most appropriate measure of the candidate’s skills.

Valparaiso University
Highest score.

Vanderbilt Law School
Readers consider all scores and their average.

Vermont Law School
Take highest score.

Villanova University
The Admissions Committee will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.

University of Virginia
Highest score.

Wake Forest University
We average if test taken more than twice.

Washburn University School of Law
Highest score.

University of Washington
Review all score information available. Highest score is considered for reporting purposes.

Washington and Lee University
Will consider explanation for widely disparate scores

Washington University School of Law
For admittance and scholarship purposes, students are evaluated based on their highest LSAT score. However, all scores are reviewed so vast discrepancies should be explained.

J. PREFERRED MEANS OF RECEIVING LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Each law school was asked to indicate its preferred means of receiving letters of recommendation. The four options listed below were offered. The list indicates preferences of schools responding.

(1) We accept those letters of recommendation which have been processed through the Law Services Letters of Recommendation Services.
(2) We prefer that students use the Law Services Letter of Recommendation Services but do accept letters directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institutions' credential service.
(3) We prefer letters which come directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institution's credential service but do accept letters from the Law Service Letter of Recommendation Service.
(4) We have no preference.

L. SCHOOLS USING A FORMULA IN THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

These schools indicated that a formula is used for pre-sorting and as an aid in determining the process for considering the file but not for determining the decision.

The specific formula used by a law school is provided in cases where that information is available.

Boalt Hall seeks a student body with a broad set of interests, backgrounds, life experiences, and perspectives. Such diversity is important in a law school, which must train its graduates not only to analyze and interpret the law, but also to reflect on competing viewpoints, advance arguments persuasively in a variety of forums, and develop policies affecting a broad range of people. Historically, Boalt Hall's diverse student body has produced graduates who have served all segments of society and who have become leaders in many fields of law, including such varied fields as civil rights, corporate, environmental, criminal, intellectual property, and family law. Exposure to a wide array of ideas, outlooks, and experiences is an important part of our students' educational and professional development.

UC Davis values diversity in its student body and considers it an important factor during the admission process. Diversity of ideas, life and work experiences, cultural and socio-economic background, academic preparation and interests are a few of the factors that will be given consideration. Each applicant brings a unique set of credentials to the admission process and subsequently to the School of Law. The educational experience for each student at UC Davis is expanded and enhanced tremendously by the diversity of the overall student body.

As a public law school, the University of California, Hastings College of the Law has a responsibility to educate lawyers who will serve the legal needs of all members of society. Hastings seeks each year to enroll students whose intellect, experience, creativity, and personal character will enable them successfully to complete their own legal education, contribute to the education of their classmates, and become accomplished lawyers who serve the needs of the public through the practice of law, the formulation of public policy, legal scholarship, and other professional endeavors. Because numeric criteria do not necessarily indicate whether an applicant will meet or contribute to these goals, Hastings considers a variety of non numeric criteria. These criteria include letters of recommendation, academic honors and awards, the rigor and difficulty of the applicant's undergraduate and graduate education, communications skills, work experience, public service, and significant achievement in other nonacademic activities. Hastings also considers whether the applicant is among the first in his or her family to attend college, is a member of groups that historically have been underrepresented in law school and the legal profession, or has experienced significant medical, personal, educational, or other adversity.

<td>“It is the policy of Ohio Northern University not to discriminate on the basis of race, religion, national or ethnic origin, gender, sexual orientation, age, or disability in its educational programs, admissions policies, employment policies, financial aid or other school administered programs.” While it is a nice starting point, a non-discrimination policy such as ONU’s, above, does not even begin to scratch the surface of what an institution must do to be a truly diverse and accepting environment. At ONU Law not only do we make a pledge against discrimination, but we go further by actively recruiting members of racial and ethnic minority groups, the LGBTQ community, geographically diverse states, a variety of undergraduate universities, and all ages to join us. It is by our differences that we create a rich learning environment where we can learn to understand ourselves and broaden our understanding of the world.</td>

<td>We abide by our mission statement which states, among several goals, that the University of Oregon School of Law strives to embody and promote: “a faculty, staff, and student community dedicated to academic freedom, personal tolerance, and equal dignity for all” and “a steadfast commitment to human diversity, both within and beyond our walls.” We consider each applicant to be unique, offering her/his own combination of academic, professional, and personal experiences. From the details of these combined experiences emerge the differences that help to define diversity. The admissions committee is charged with the responsibility of determining how well this combination of experiences has prepared the applicant to successfully undertake a legal education.</td>
<td>The University of the Pacific community including students, faculty, staff, administrators, and alumni believes that diversity and inclusion are essential to the fulfillment of our institutional mission. The University of San Diego seeks to enroll a highly qualified and diverse student body to ensure academic excellence and enrichment of legal education as well as legal profession through the participation of students with different perspectives and backgrounds. While LSAT and undergraduate GPA are important elements, other factors are significant in the admission decision process.

USF seeks to admit a diverse group of students who are among the most capable law students in the nation. We seek students who will work to promote the well-being of society, further the cause of justice domestically and abroad, and contribute to the common good.

At USF there is no formula to guarantee admission. Instead we consider multiple factors, including an applicant’s undergraduate grade point average, LSAT score, undergraduate school, undergraduate course selection, and any graduate degrees. In addition, we consider past work experience, recommendations, community service, an applicant’s overall potential to render significant contributions to the legal profession, and diversity.

Diversity is a core value of the law school, and, consistent with our mission, we aim to admit students from diverse backgrounds, including men and women of differing races, ethnicities, religions, sexual orientations, and ages as well as individuals with disabilities. Diversity enables students to learn from one another, promotes a variety of perspectives, and enhances empathy and critical engagement. In particular, the law school has a goal of providing meaningful representation of historically underrepresented minorities, such as African Americans and Latinos. We recognize that, by virtue of our nation’s struggle with racial inequality, such students are both likely to have experiences of particular importance to the law school’s mission and are less likely to be admitted in meaningful numbers on criteria that ignore those experiences. To help us assess these qualities, applicants may submit an optional essay on diversity.

The School of Law has adopted a special admissions policy that recognizes the national need for representation in the legal profession for those groups that traditionally have been under represented, including, but not limited to, members of ethnic minority groups. This policy recognizes that the traditional criteria of LSAT scores and undergraduate grade point averages are not the only indicators of academic potential. Other relevant factors which are considered include academic potential and motivation as indicated by letters of recommendation or other sources of information, practical experiences and achievements in service to the applicant’s community, extracurricular studies or activities that indicate motivation for success in law school.

Seattle University School of Law embraces a wholly nondiscriminatory admission policy and philosophy. We welcome applications from all persons without regard to age, sex, race, religion, color, national origin, marital status, sexual or political orientation, or disability. In addition, we consider a candidate’s evidence of particular talents or backgrounds that will contribute specifically to the diversity of the law school community.

December LSAT Questions

If an applicant takes the LSAT a second time in December, do you prefer that the applicant:

a) complete and forward their application but notify you that they will be taking the test in December; or

b) wait to submit their application until a score is received?

<td>Our application asks for any LSAT tests you have taken or plan to take. If you decide to take an LSAT test that you did not indicate on your application, you need to notify the Law Admission Office so that your application can be placed on hold until the score is received. Once a decision is rendered there is no appeals process; all decisions are final. You can either apply after your score has been received or before, and we will hold your application for all tests taken before our application deadline of April 15. | Cornell University       | Merit Based
Register with the LSAC Candidate Referral Service, and if you are selected to receive a waiver based on our selection parameters, we will notify you by email. CRS fee waivers are processed soon after each LSAT exam (the absence of a GPA on record with LSAC will not preclude you from consideration).

Teach for America, AmeriCorps, and Peace Corps
If you are a current or past member, email a copy of your participation letter along with your LSAC number to jdadmissions@cornell.edu. Military
If you are a current or past member of the United States military, email a copy of your documentation and LSAC number to jdadmissions@cornell.edu (this does not include participation in a foreign military service).

Need Based
You should apply for a LSAC waiver initially, and if granted, our application fee will automatically be waived when you apply to Cornell Law. If your request is denied by LSAC, you may complete and submit our application along with your LSAC number to jdadmissions@cornell.edu. |

| Drake University | Fee waiver granted to all students applying online prior to April 1st priority deadline. Simply click the “request a fee waiver” box during application process. |
| Duke University | We provide a need-based fee waiver for applicants who have a waiver for the LSAT, and consider need-based request from other applicants (form available on website). We also extend merit-based fee waivers based on the results of periodic searches of the LSAC’s Candidate Referral Service. To be included in the pool that we are searching, candidates should be sure that their CRS account is active, their intended enrollment year is set correctly, and that they have both a reportable LSAT score and either a self-reported or LSAC-calculated GPA. |
| Duquesne University | No Application Fee. |
| Elon University | The application fee is waived through LSAC. |
| University of Florida | No fee waiver—$30 application fee is State of Florida charge and cannot be waived |
| Florida Coastal Law School | Other: Florida Coastal no longer charges an application fee for first-time applicants |
| Florida International University | Request fee waiver by emailing lawadmit@fiu.edu. |
| Fordham University | Other: Request online or by e-mail to lawadmissions@law.fordham.edu. At Fordham, fee waivers are need-based. |
| George Mason University | Applicants are automatically granted a fee waiver when submitting an application online through LSAC. The College of Law also grants automatic fee waivers to outstanding candidates identified through the LSDAS service of LSAC. |
| Georgetown University Law Center | To obtain a fee waiver, you need to go online and download the application. Then you can send it to us via e-mail or fax. It takes from around 3–5 days for it to be processed. If approved, your waiver will be linked to your LSAC number. |
| University of Georgia | Persons receiving a fee waiver from LSAC are automatically granted an application fee waiver once proper documentation is received by the admissions office. Contact the Office of Admissions (ugajd@uga.edu or 706–542–7060). |

FAQs

FEE WAIVERS

HOW DOES AN APPLICANT OBTAIN AN APPLICATION FEE WAIVER?

- a. If he/she applies on-line?
- b. If he/she applies before a designated date?
- c. Is there a cut-off deadline?

Touro Law Center
- Touro Law Center waives the application fee automatically if they have an LSAC fee waiver. Additionally, we will consider fee waiver upon request accompanied by statement of financial need.

Tulane University
- Candidates who receive LSAT/CAS fee waivers are automatically granted application fee waivers by Tulane. Tulane also uses the Candidate Referral Service (CRS) to offer fee waivers to certain groups of Candidates. Others may be granted Tulane application fee waivers in cases of serious financial need. Applicants who wish to request an application fee waiver on the basis of serious financial need, should send us a request explaining their circumstances. Applicants should contact the Office of Admission for more information.

Tuoro Law Center
- No application fee.

University of Tulsa
- Fee waivers can be obtained at https://law.utulsa.edu/jd-applicants/jd-fee-waiver-application/

University of Utah

<td>J.D./M.B.A.—The School of Law and the College of Business Administration offer a coordinated program leading to the separate conferral of both the Juris Doctor and Master of Business Administration degrees. This innovative program allows students to obtain both degrees at a lower cost and in less time than would be required if each degree were earned separately. The JD/MS in Government Organization and Leadership (GOAL) joint degree program prepares students for leadership positions with government entities and the organizations that work closely with them. Students gain an invaluable mix of career-driven legal experience and professional subtleties that can't be learned from a textbook. They will see the inner workings of our nation's capital. This program allows students to obtain both degrees at a lower cost and in less time than would be required if each degree were earned separately. The JD/MS in Negotiation and Dispute Resolution—The School of Law and the Werner Institute for Negotiation and Dispute Resolution offer a coordinated program leading to the separate conferral of both the Juris Doctor and Master of Science in Negotiation and Dispute Resolution degrees. This program allows students to obtain both degrees at a lower cost and in less time than would be required if each degree were earned separately. The Werner Institute is one of the premier programs of its kind in the nation and the location of this interdisciplinary program within the Law School allows students pursuing both degrees the opportunity to simultaneously leverage the strengths of the Law School and the Institute.</td>

<td>Students save considerable time and living expenses while earning the same academically rigorous Regent legal education taught from a Christian worldview. Students will enter the job market one year sooner than students in a traditional 3-year program. Students study full-time for six consecutive terms by starting in late May as opposed to mid-August. After the first summer, accelerated program students are integrated into the same classes as all other law students, studying the same curriculum under the same professors as enjoyed by students in the traditional three-year program. Students will experience a law-practice externship as a part of the Accelerated Program. Due to a rigorous schedule, students will have less opportunity for extracurricular activities and summer employment. Requires at least a 152 LSAT, a 3.0 cumulative UGPA, and other indicators of high academic promise. Applications and supporting documents should be submitted via the LSAC website. Priority consideration date for the two-year program is January 15. Late applications are considered on a space-available basis. Students admitted to the program must submit an enrollment agreement and seat deposit no later than April 1. It is recommended that applicants take the October or December LSAT preceding the desired June enrollment. Applicants must submit an addendum in their application addressing their reasons for seeking enrollment in an accelerated, rigorous program of study. The admissions committee will be looking for a commitment to disciplined, intensive legal study.</td>

1. The Samuel and Anne Hopkins Scholarship Fund was established through the generosity of brothers Henry H. Hopkins ’68, Frederick M. Hopkins ’92, Robert B. Hopkins ’88, and Samuel B. Hopkins to honor their parents Samuel and Anne Hopkins. Samuel Hopkins was a 1938 graduate of the School of Law and a distinguished Baltimore Civic and Business leader and member of the Maryland Bar. The Hopkins Scholarship will go to an outstanding student enrolled at the University of Maryland Carey School of Law. For application information, click here: https://www.law.umaryland.edu/prospective/hopkins.html

2. The Osborne Scholarship at the University of Maryland Carey School of Law was created by Hamish Osborne ’86 and his wife Christy to provide full tuition and fees for an outstanding student who is engaged in a professional career at the time of application to law school. The Osborne Scholarship will go to a student enrolled in the full-time program at Maryland Carey Law who has a stated interest in pursuing a career in private legal practice or business (defined broadly to include business, financial, commercial and law-related activities in government, health, or the private sector). For application information, click here: https://www.law.umaryland.edu/prospective/osborne.html

<td>Each year we have new donor funded scholarships available for students. We also have a new Dean's Public Service Scholarship which is a guaranteed 20% annual scholarship for students who have completed a minimum of one year of service with a qualifying organization. The Access to Justice Scholars program is a $75,000 scholarship program for individuals who have an interest in and commitment to pursuing legal practice in a small-town or rural setting. Through the program, UST School of Law works with the Minnesota State Bar Association to match Access to Justice scholars with a mentor experienced in small-town or rural practice. All academically qualified applicants are invited to submit an essay explaining their interest in, and commitment to, pursuing legal practice in a small-town or rural setting. The essay should be submitted with the application for admission. Applicants will be invited to interview with a faculty admissions committee. Awardees are granted $25,000 or the equivalent percentage of tuition each year of the three-year J.D. program.</td>

a) Resumé: Required. No page limit.
b) Personal Statement: Required. No page limit. Your personal statement should speak to factors in your background that indicate your potential success as a Creighton law student, such as your motivation to study law, your work experience, special interests, honors, community involvement, or personal hardships.
d) Unique Statement for your school: n/a.
e) Additional Essays: n/a.
f) Letters of Recommendation: Two letters are required. You may submit additional letters. We prefer that one of your letters be from a college professor. We recommend you submit your letters through LSAC.
g) Addenda—areas of content: Optional. No page limit. You may include an essay about why your GPA and LSAT scores may not indicate your ability to succeed in law school.

EMORY UNIVERSITY

a) Resumé: A resume is highly recommended.
b) Personal Statement: The personal statement is required. Applicants may choose to write about any topic(s) they believe would be most helpful to the Admission Committee. The Personal Statement should not exceed two pages (typed, double-spaced). Applicants will disadvantage themselves by disregarding this limit.
c) Diversity Statement: Diversity Statements are accepted but not required. We recommend that diversity statements do not exceed two pages (typed, double-spaced).
d) Unique Statement for your school: Unique School Statements are accepted but not required. We recommend that unique school statements do not exceed two pages (typed, double-spaced).
e) Additional Essays: Additional essays are accepted but not required. We recommend that additional essays do not exceed two pages (typed, double-spaced).
f) Letters of Recommendation: We require two letters to be sent through the LSAC Letter of Recommendation Service. We strongly advise that an academic professor prepare one of these letters.
g) Addenda—areas of content: Addenda are accepted but not required. We recommend that addenda not exceed two pages (typed, double-spaced).

LIBERTY UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW

- a) Resumé: Recommended.
- b) Personal Statement: Required—Applicants are required to provide a personal statement as part of their Application for Admission. Personal statements must be typed double-spaced, using a 12-point font. Optimal length is four pages, but the number of pages is optional. Applicants should address each of the points below, in order of preference. In addition, applicants may wish to present information regarding family background, educational opportunities, financial resources, etc., that may have affected their academic performance or test scores. Applicants should address these 5 points in their personal statement:
  1. Calling: Why do you want to be a lawyer? Describe your personal and professional goals.
  2. Mission: Explain your reasons for applying to Liberty University School of Law. Include your perspective on faith, life, and morality, and why the law school’s distinct mission is attractive to you.
  3. Talents: Share any personal talents, strengths, character traits, and interests that contribute to your preparation to study and practice law.
  4. Experience: What educational, employment, and life experiences have contributed to your preparation for the study of law? (Scholastic, civic, and professional honors or awards may be cited here or in your optional résumé.) Influences: Discuss particular factors that have had a significant impact on your personal, professional, or spiritual growth, or your vision for the future.
- c) Diversity Statement: n/a.
- d) Unique Statement for your school: See personal statement requirements.
- e) Additional Essays:
- f) Letters of Recommendation: Required. Two letters of recommendation are required. One recommendation (preferably from a faculty advisor or professor in major field of study) should address applicant’s academic performance and abilities. If the applicant has been out of school for several years or has served in the military, a letter from an employer or commanding officer is appropriate. The second recommendation should be a character reference from someone who has personal knowledge of the applicant’s integrity. Letters of recommendation from family members or from “VIPs” lacking personal knowledge of you are of no value. Recommenders may send letters to the Law School Admission Council (LSAC) or directly to the School of Law Office of Admissions.
- g) Addenda—areas of content: n/a.

T. PARTNERS IN THE PROCESS

Seven organizations share in the pre-law advisory process as active partners. Each has provided a basic summary of their services to APLA’s, Pre-Law Advisors and law school applicants.

AccessLex Institute

1. AccessLex Institute can assist individual pre-law advisors by visiting their campuses and presenting information to pre-law students on funding their legal education. In addition, AccessLex Institute offers printed and online materials about their loan programs, as well as information on topics such as the importance of good credit. Find out more at www.accesslex.org.

2. AccessLex Institute staff members are available to participate in panels at regional APLA meetings, as well as to deliver presentations on topics such as “How to Pay for Law School—Financial Aid Options for Law Students.”

3. AccessLex offers a free student loan help line through AccessConnex.
